

Lacan the Elephant

My philosopher friends

Georges Jeanres

Lacan the Elephant
strolls along so elegant.

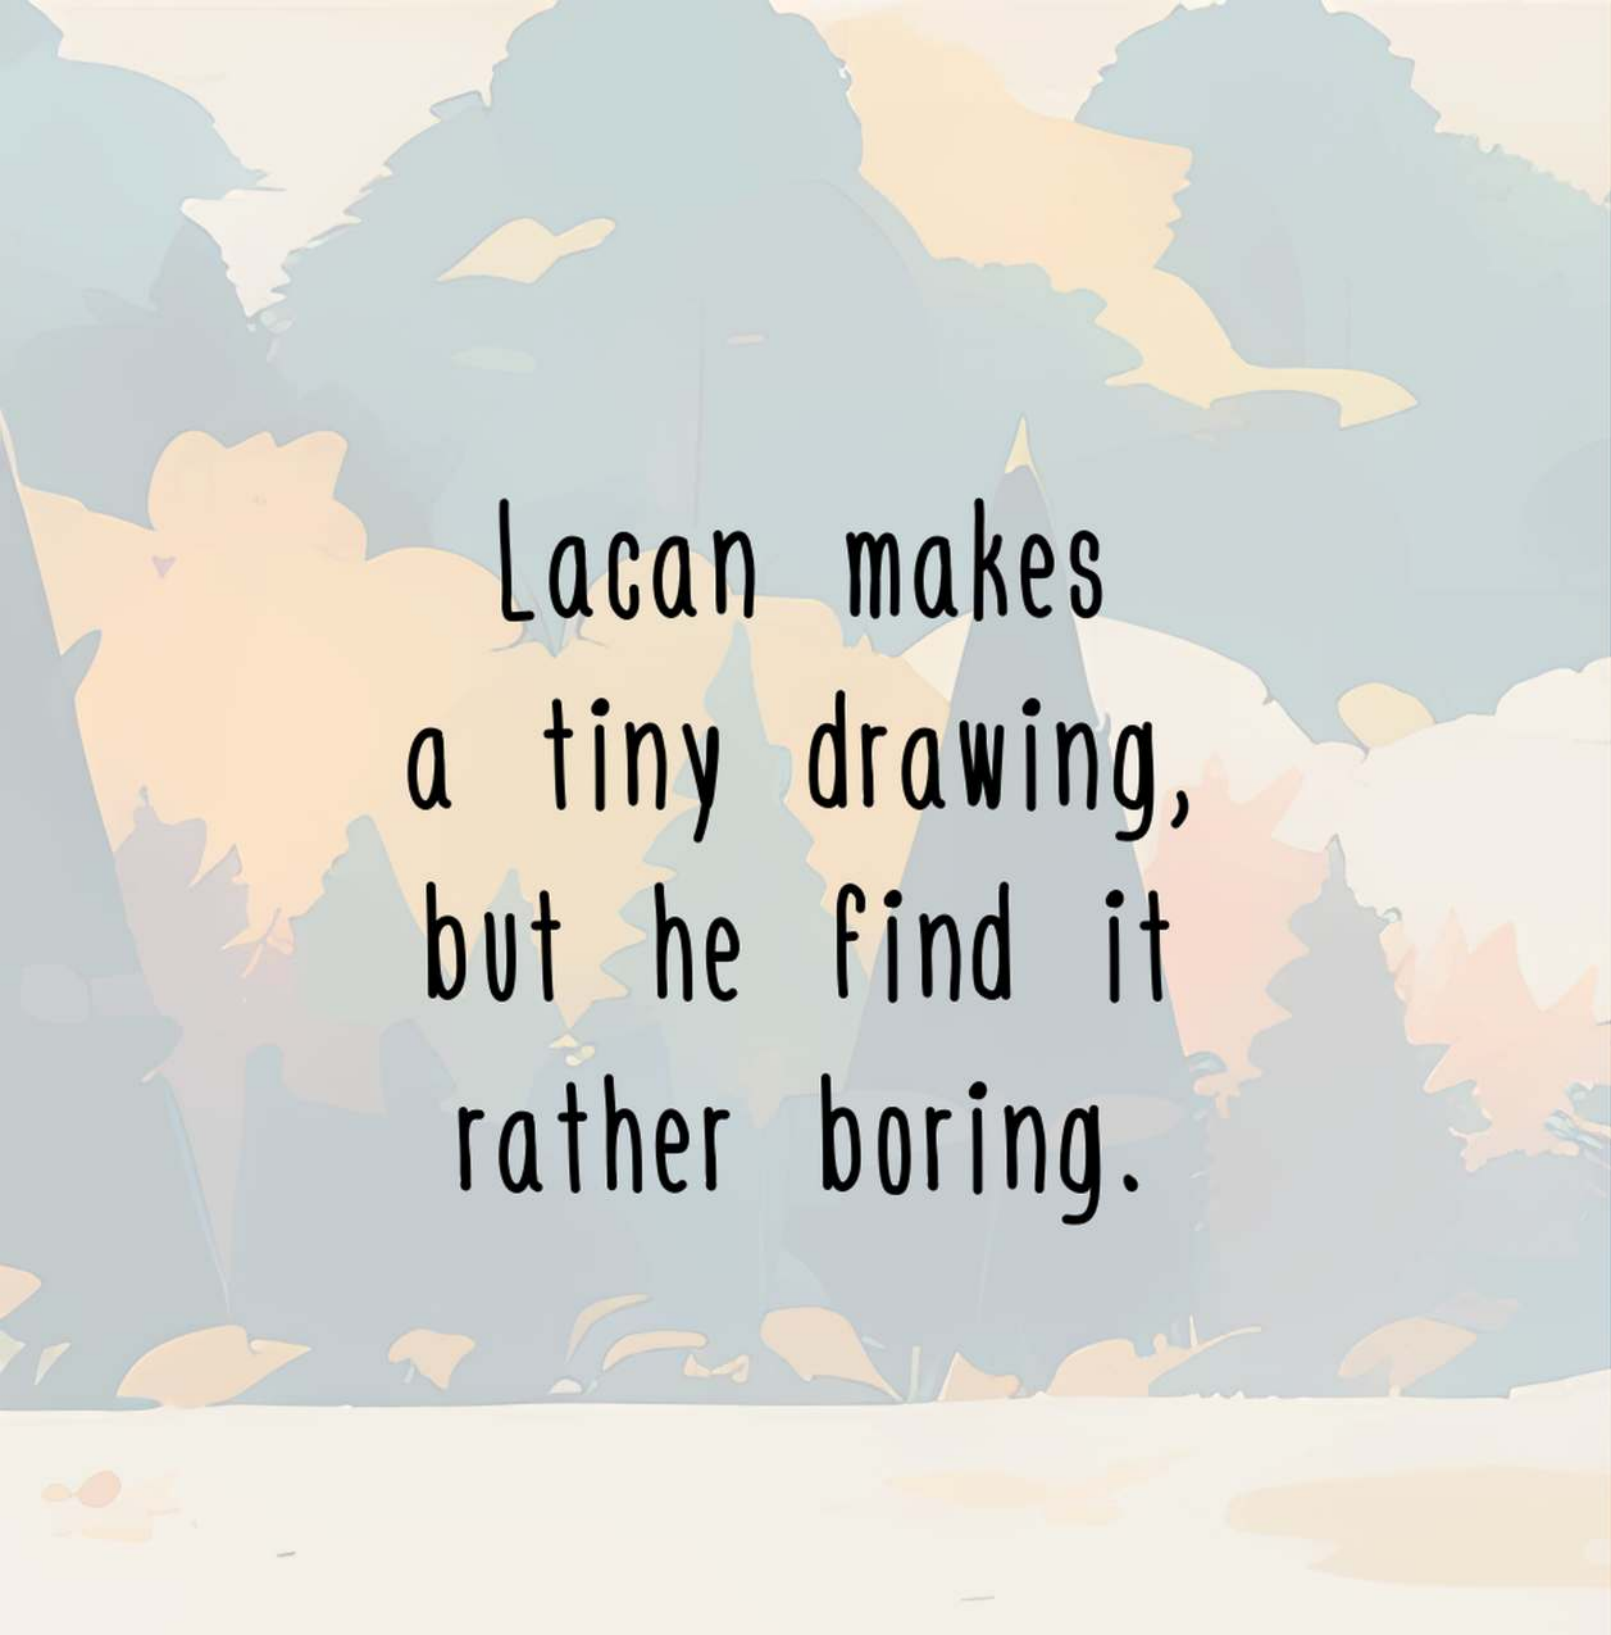

In a corner of the wood
he spots a tree
that's looking good.

"It is such
a beautiful tree,
I want to show
everybody!"

Lacan makes
a tiny drawing,
but he find it
rather boring.

A watercolor illustration of a forest scene. In the background, there are rolling hills or mountains in shades of orange, yellow, and light green. The middle ground is filled with various types of trees, including tall evergreens and deciduous trees with autumn-colored foliage in shades of orange, red, and yellow. In the foreground, there are large, rounded rocks or boulders in shades of blue and grey. A body of water, possibly a lake or a wide river, is visible in the lower left corner. The overall style is soft and painterly, with a focus on natural colors and textures.

The colors he drew on the page
don't shine like those
on nature's stage!

A stylized illustration of a forest at night. The scene features several tall, dark green coniferous trees with light green trunks. The ground is a mix of brown and green patches. In the background, a large, pale yellow crescent moon hangs in a dark blue sky, surrounded by small, yellow, five-pointed stars. The overall style is soft and painterly, with a muted color palette.

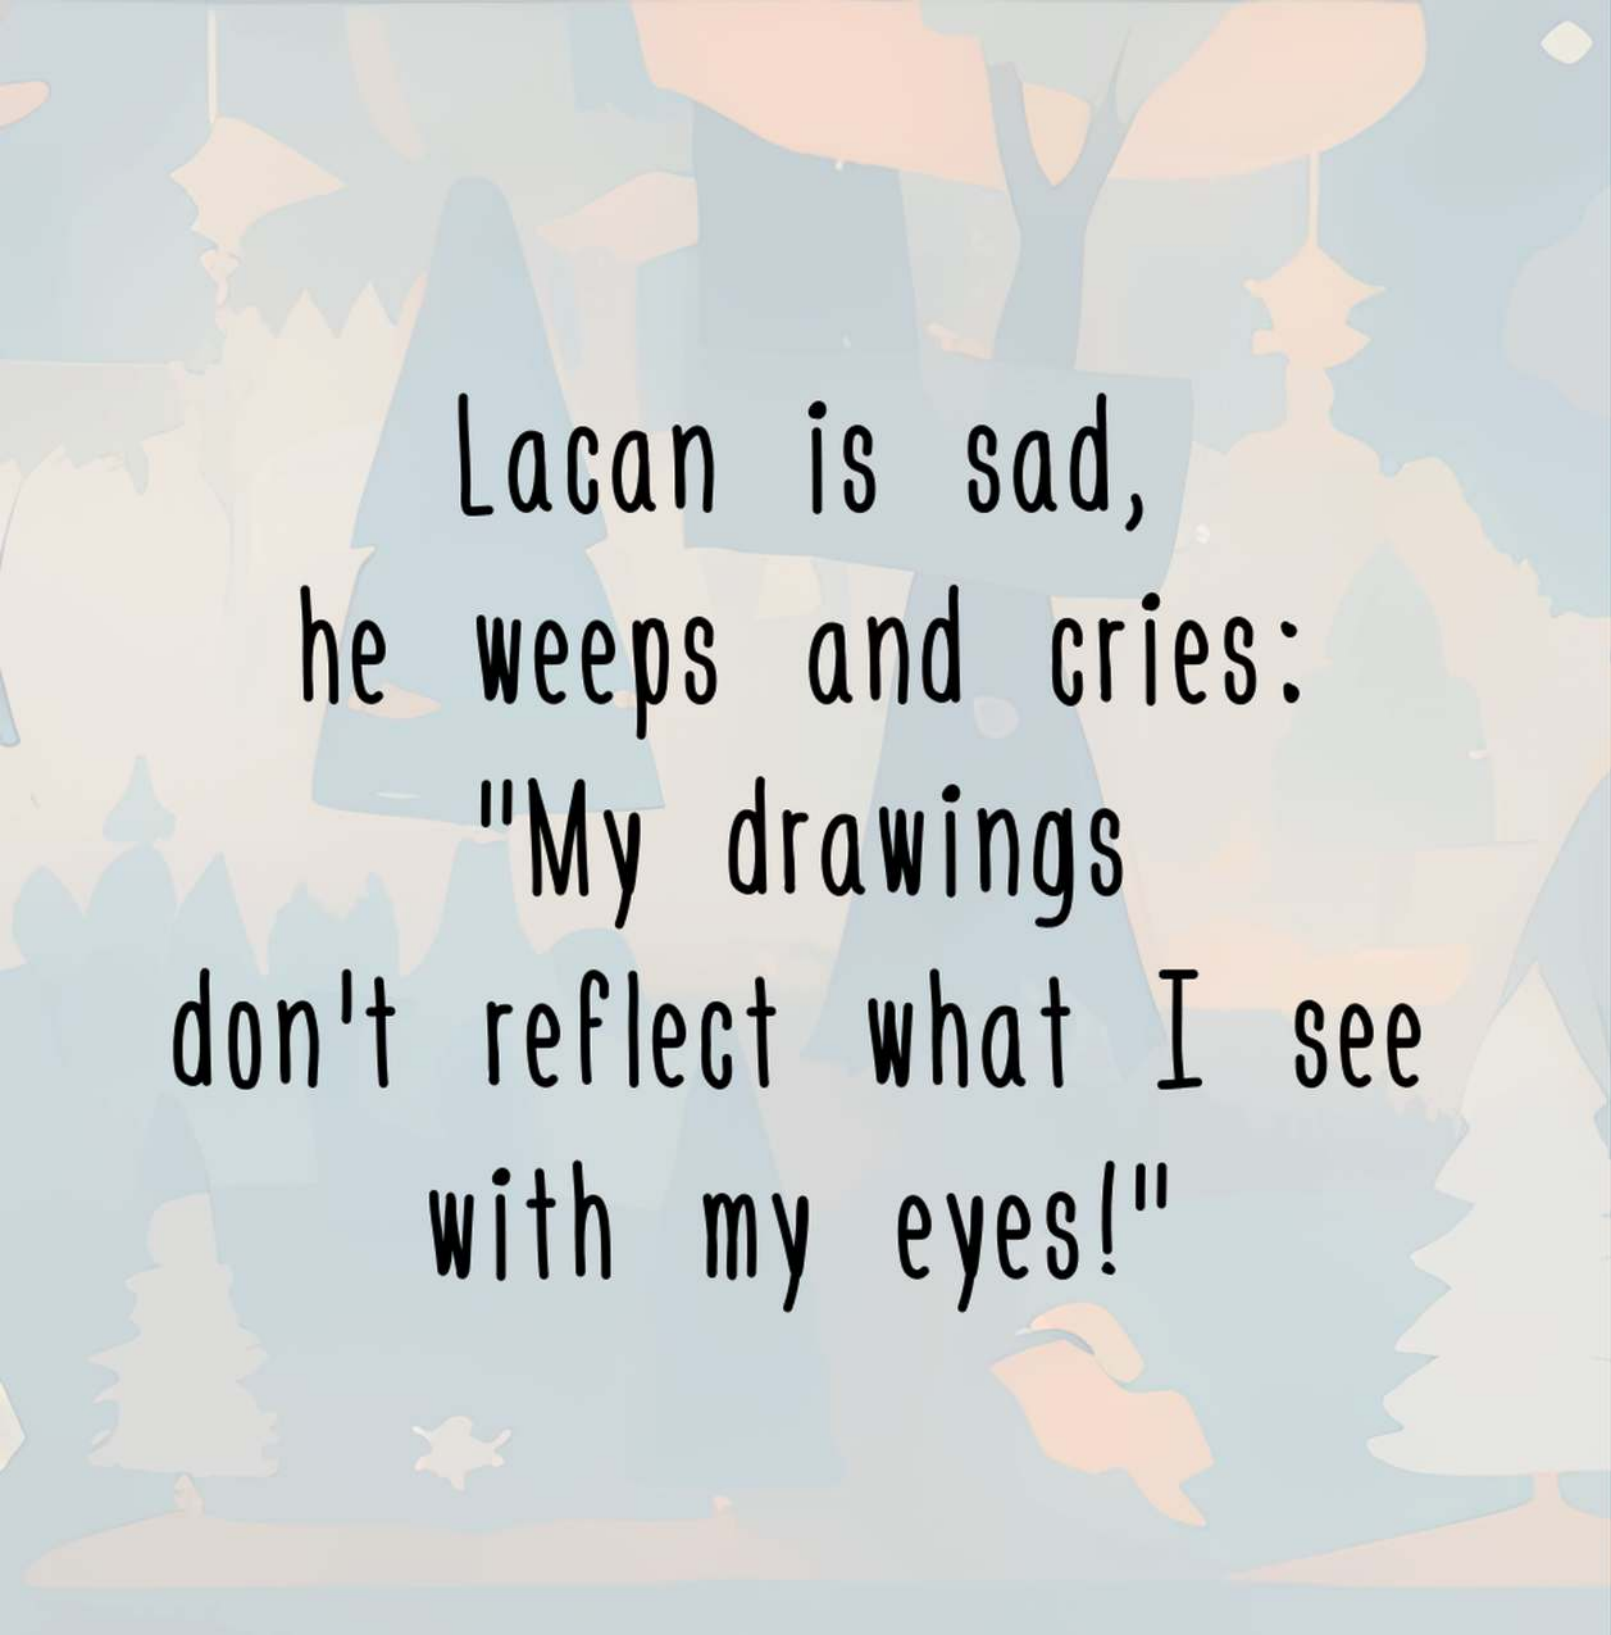

Lacan feels quite upset,
he'll have to start anew,
I bet!

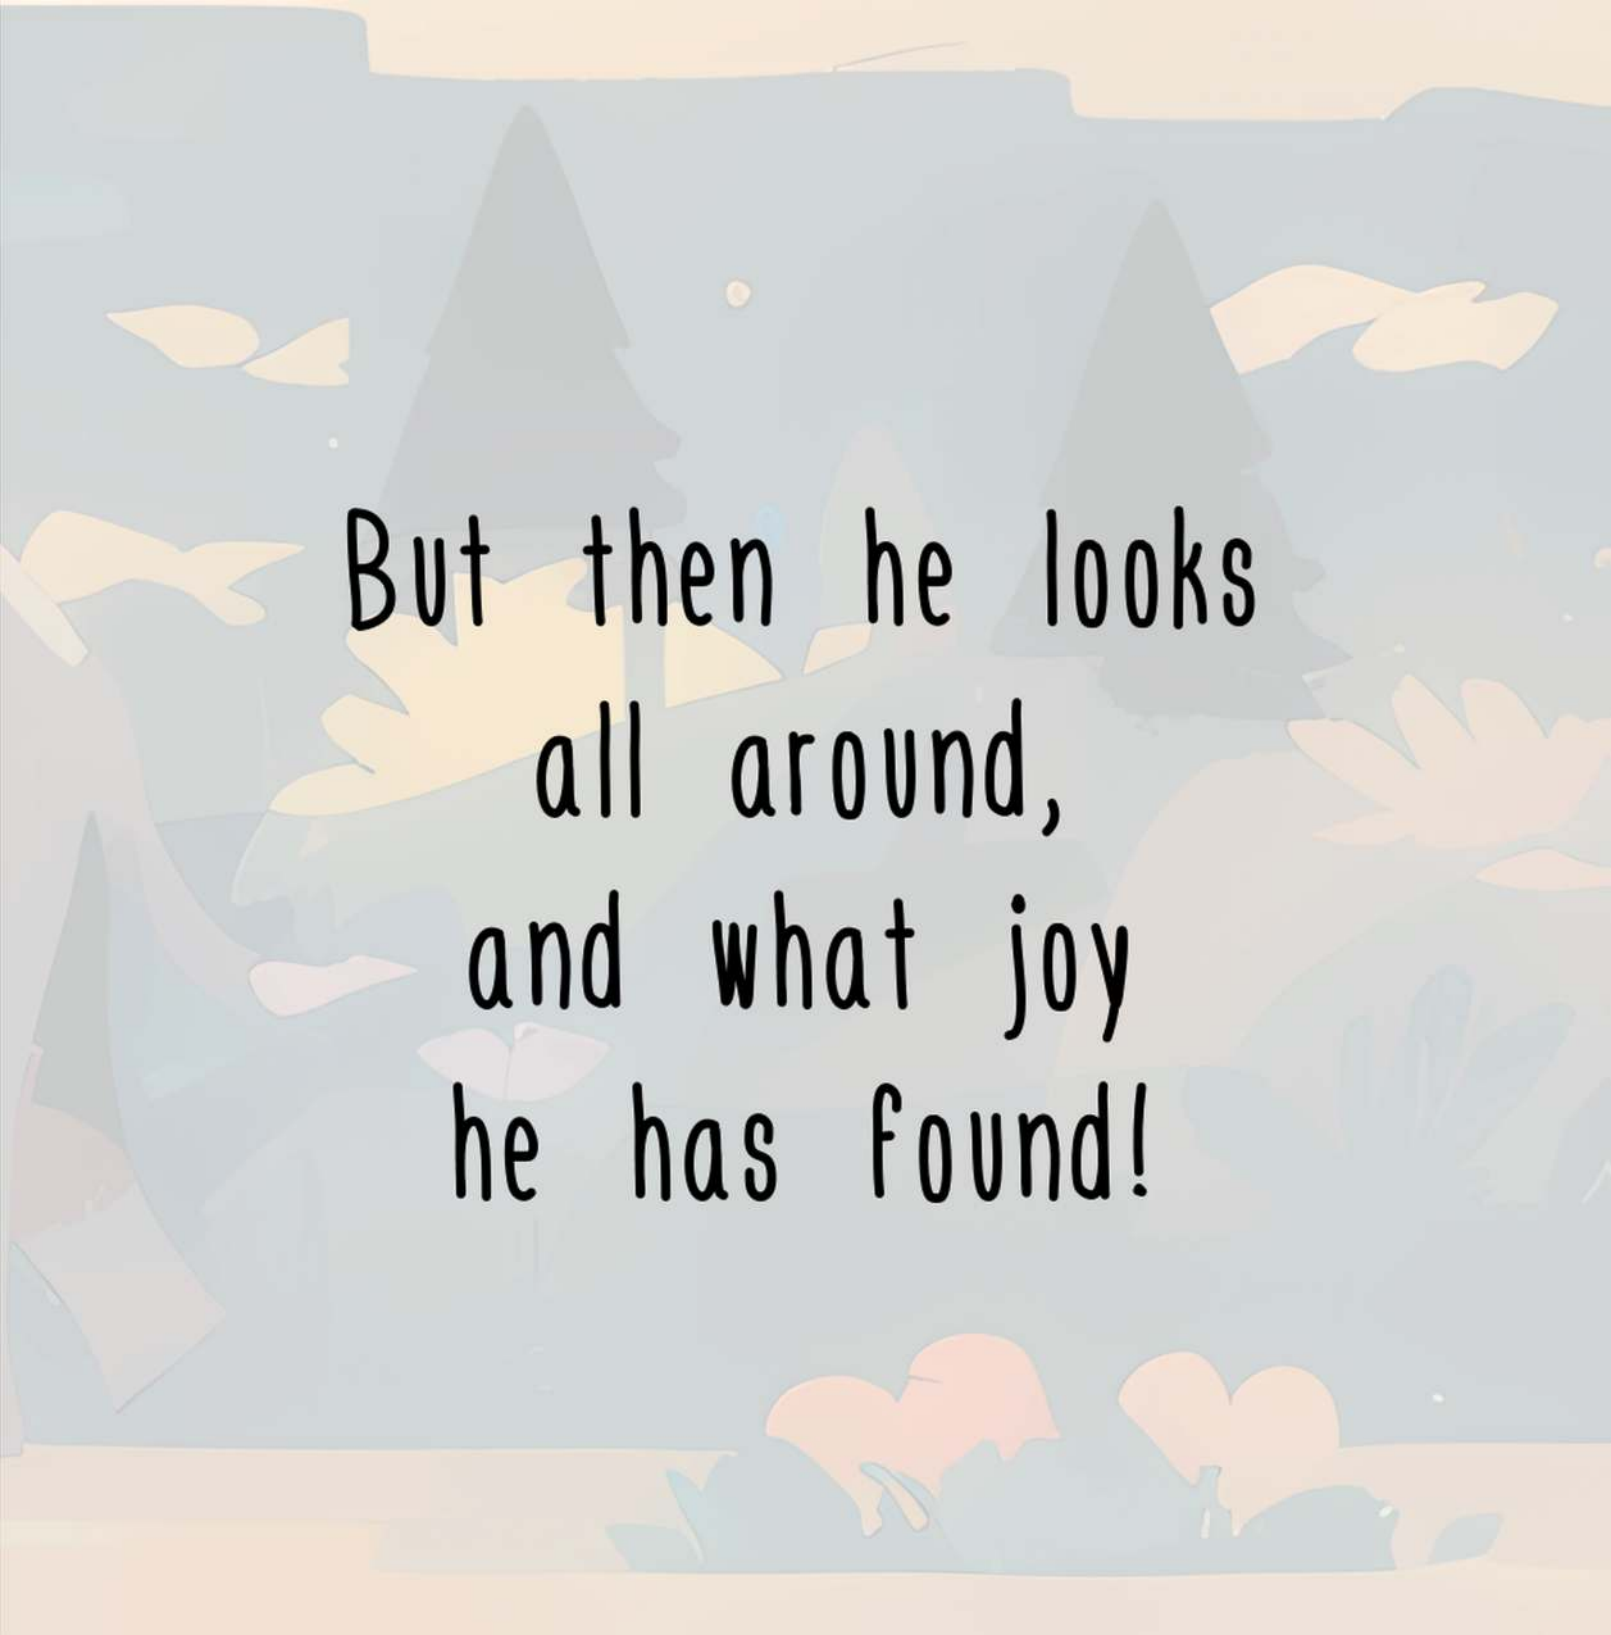

He tries
again and again,
but his efforts are
all in vain.

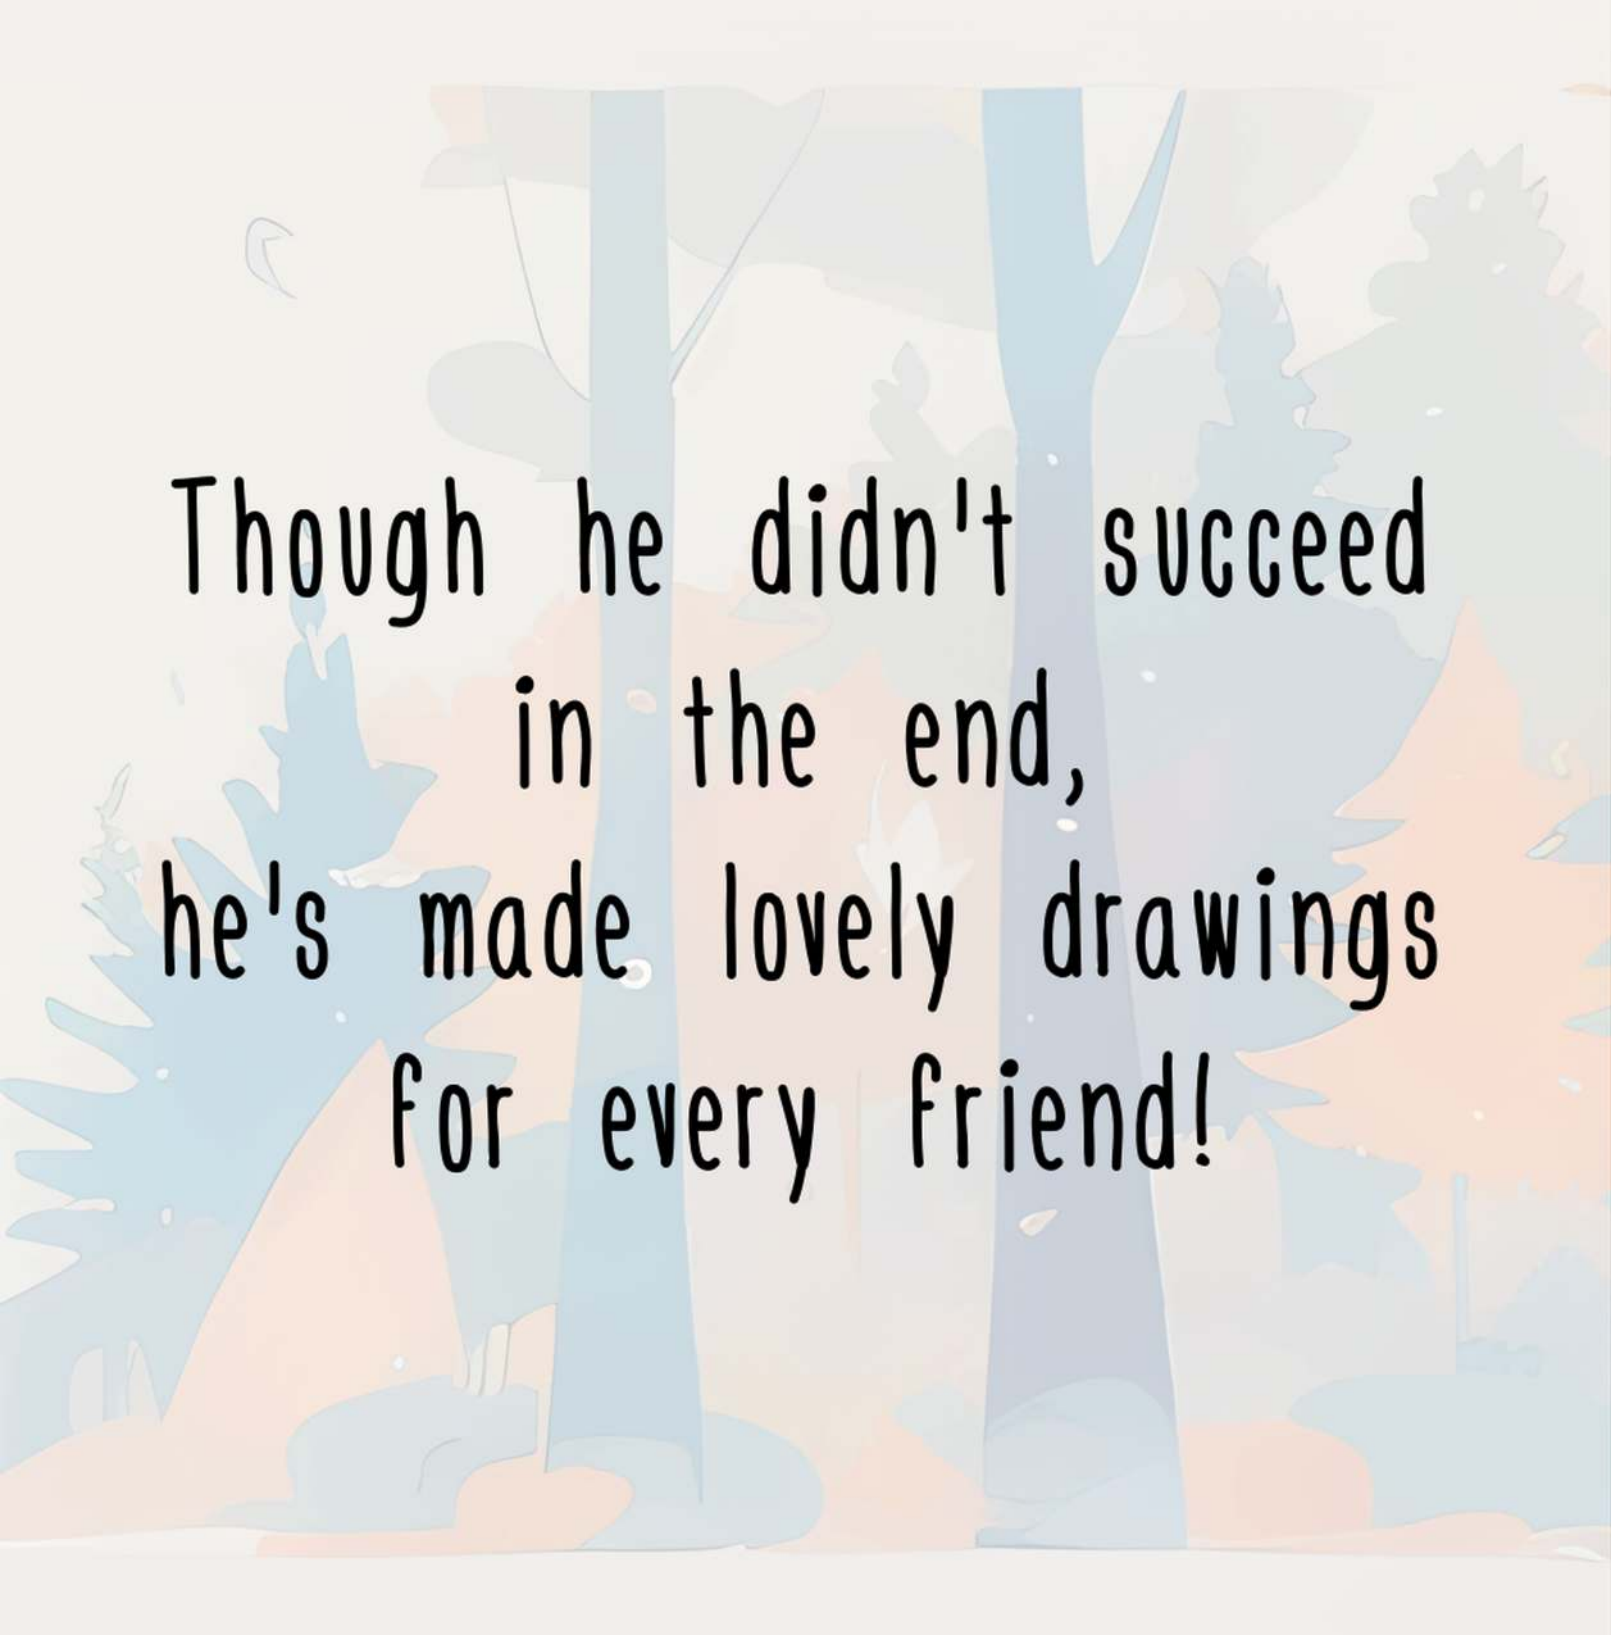

Lacan is sad,
he weeps and cries:
"My drawings
don't reflect what I see with my eyes!"

But then he looks
all around,
and what joy
he has found!

Though he didn't succeed
in the end,
he's made lovely drawings
for every friend!

FOR GROWN UPS:

oh JACQUES LACAN is a French psychoanalyst.
He says there is always a gap between our ideas and the real world.

This hole is a LACK
that bothers us and can drive us crazy.
We can never fill it, we are always disappointed.
He says we should accept it to live in peace.
